

Dr. Gordon Moe

A cardiologist at St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto, Dr. Moe has spent many years dedicated to the study of stroke and heart diseases and promoting healthy lifestyles as a preventive measure through symposiums and publications, such as Heartbeat News. His research interests include the impact of ethnicity on cardiovascular diseases.

Dr. Moe has been the President of Chinese-Canadian Council of the Heart and Stroke Foundation and has helped raise millions in funds for the foundation through its annual fundraising event 'Sing for Your Heart.' This busy cardiologist and University of Toronto Professor of Medicine is also the Director of the Heart Failure Program at St. Michael's Hospital.

Despite an extremely busy schedule as a top specialist in the medical field, Dr. Moe still takes time and effort to educate the general public on heart disease prevention. He hopes to build a better and healthier society, especially in the Chinese community.
